Interruptions

Lesson for March 4, 1951

PEOPLE KEEP making your life shorter every day. For time is the stuff of which life is made, and we never do have a full 24 hours a day. After taking out what has to be spent in sleep, eating and so on, and taking out what has to be on your job, whatever it is, we still ought to have a few hours to call our own. But you are like most people, you get from one interruption to another. If it isn't the telephone it's the door-bell. The more important we are, the more you are likely to be interrupted. Once there was a man who became president of the college where he had taught. In the years he mourned the change. "It seems to me," he said, "I never had a consecutive half-hour any time to think about anything. Now as I ever what I planned. Life has become one long series of interruptions."

Dr. Foreman

Our Scheduled Stops

The LIFE of the Master himself, as we shall see, was a long series of interruptions. The tenth chapter of Luke is a good example. Jesus himself at this time had one great thing before him: the Cross. He was going up to Jerusalem not to talk to legislators or to listen to lawyers' arguments or to hold interviews with rich young people. He was going to die.

A man on his death-bed should be spared interruptions. He would not be blamed if he said to interrupters one and all, "Sorry, I can't be bothered. Please, my assistants if there is anything you want done."

But Jesus did not say anything of the kind. He did not fume over the many unscheduled stops on his life's highway. He took time to clear up misunderstandings; he took time for little children when even his best friends thought he ought not to be bothered; he took time to answer the question of the rich young man; he did not brush off James and John when they came to him with their ill-considered petition; he even took time to take care of a beggar's needs.

* * *

Parables by the Wayside

Jesus DID not always take the initiative in every situation, though he usually controlled every situation. When the Pharisees asked him about marriage he did not begin to talk about marriage; let me suggest the topic of divorce instead." When the young ruler came up to him, Jesus did not say, "Did you have an appointment? Are an interviewer?" Jesus not only did not resent other people's needs. He never seems to have considered an interruption in his life.

Is this example of Jesus to say that we ought not to plan our days ahead of time, or that we ought never to try to "budget" our time? Must we never undertake any project, but always be willing to let other people suggest what we are to do?

Not at all. The example of Jesus shows that if and when interruptions occur, if we share his spirit we will not be irritated by them or resent them. For what Jesus did, what he was to make use of the interruption. Each one was turned into a Parable Ministry." Indeed, a modern critic would say the best part of Jesus' life was made up of such by-the-way ministries.

* * *

Out-of-the-Ways

MANY of Jesus' teachings we would never have had, if people had not interrupted him or asked questions! How many of the parables would never have been told if he had refused to perform those he planned and scheduled for himself? It is what we do "by the way" that makes up life's service, the most part.

The story of the Good Samaritan no doubt an incident from life. We are not told what were the original errands of the priest and the Levite and the Samaritan, likely the first two were on their appointments.

The priest and the Levite missed the wonderful chance, just when the poor beaten traveler came to speak, on their agenda. But the Samaritan was delayed, and was bothered, by what he did find a man in trouble. But what a willing to do by the way, for if he had not planned for it, him the immortality of the parable.
